Motor Muster celebrates the opening of The Henry Ford’s new exhibit, Driven to Win: Racing in America presented by General Motors, with a spotlight on auto racing. Americans love speed and spectacle. Whether it’s open-wheel competition at Indianapolis, super stock duels at the dragstrip or a 25-lap feature at the local dirt oval, racing stirs excitement — and sells cars. Automakers brag about their victories and give their production cars racing-inspired names. Pontiac had the Bonneville, the Le Mans and the Trans Am. Studebaker and Dodge both used Daytona, while Ford claimed Talladega. Chevrolet topped everyone, naming its entire brand for Swiss-American race driver Louis Chevrolet. In 2021, we’ll remember the cars, the drivers and the tracks that made racing in America so special.
